ok, i'm gonna list what I own and state what I actually USE (because I think more often than not, there's a difference).
And I'm even listing non-noise makers (booo to that type of gear except the fireface, which i love).

own and use:

non-noisemakers
fireface 800
motu micro express
krk V6 monitors
sony mdr-7506 headphones
mackie big knob
edit
2.5 Dual PPC PowerMac w/ 1gb of RAM (and lots of storage)

noisemakers
md-uw mkIII
mm mkII
TI polar proteus /1 (yes I said /1)
kaoss pad 3
reaktor 5
live 7
sampler

own but don't use (it's all for sale except for logic pro. we might get back together after the break up, but I'm not sure...):

logic pro
battery 2 (FOR SALE! CHEAP!)
imposcar (FOR SALE! CHEAP!)
kurzweil 2500r (FOR SALE!)
alesis ion (FOR SALE!)
remote 25 controller (at a friend's house)
trumpet! lol

...i'm willing to part with the software for really low prices. damn the lack of resaleability of software. . .

Damn you, actuel!! Now I have to rewrite everything I wrote last night! A perfectly good post that I spent a good 15 minutes on and actually edited like three times... down the drain! :P

Hardware Ish:

Machinedrum UW MkII

Monomachine SFX-6

Roland TR-909

Future Retro FR-777

Controller:

Novation Remote SL 37

CPUs:

PowerMac G5 2x2.5 GHz, 4 GB RAM

Macbook Pro 2.4 GHz Intel Core 2 Duo, 2 GB RAM

In The Box:

Ableton Live 6 w/ Sampler & Operator

Alesis M1 Active Monitors

FX:

Korg Kaoss Pad 3
Line 6 DL-4 Delay
Moog MF-105 MuRF

Guitar Ish:

Gibson Les Paul Jimmy Page Signature
Gretsch '57 Reissue Silver Jet 1973 Fender Twin Reverb Silverface
a few other pedal fx which I rarely, rarely use

Ish I Covet:

Toft ATB 16 Mixer (top o' the list!)
Lots more fx (TC Electronic M3000, Eventide H3000, Memory Man, a new overdrive/distortion pedal but not sure which) Altiverb 6
Apogee Rosetta 800
Apogee Big Ben
Mackie Control MCU Pro
Schippmann Ebbe und Flut

It never ends... sigh

But I'm out on instruments (for now). I'd rather have a bunch of fx and extend what I've already got. Plus, I'm an engineer so I dig stupid shit like converters and digital clocks! :side:

Re:Gear List Thread (you knew it was coming) v.2

Posted by stega - 2008/01/25 05:18

Copied over from my first intro post:

Equipment:

* MD

* Korg Prophecy - prob my fav synth after my MD.

* Novation Nova - nice interface, and nice for general synth sounds.

* Korg Z1 - was really hoping this was going to be a polyphonic prophecy - able to take over duties from both the Nova (pads and generic stuff) and the Proph (leads and basses), but was a bit disappointed - doesnt quite have the bite or the fatness of sound of my proph, plus its a mare to program (saying that, the Proph is just as much a nightmare - only difference is that I've had 12 years to get used to programming it).
* Roland MV8000 - never really got on with the workflow in this one, so plan is to sell it.
* Guitar stuff - a Fender custom Telecaster, Musicman 5 string bass, Yamaha electro-acoustic, POD XT live and a looper pedal.

Plans are to strip the synths right down to MD and MnM (plus my prophecy if i cant find a second hand sf-6). Want to keep my music making both portable and as simple a process as possible.

Dont do the software thing. Did once upon a time - Music X on the Amiga :D ...but that was a long time ago..

Stephen

Makes Noise

MD SPS1 Classic (love it)
Electribe SX (learning to love it)
Nord G2 Engine (love it right in the ear)
Waldorf Pulse Plus (love it but have been neglecting it lately)
Yamaha CS15 (love it but have been neglecting it lately)
Bleep Labs - Thingymagoop (it is funny)
Kalimba (when bored)

Processes Noise

Boss VF1 - (Great little effex box)
Alesis 3630 - (rubbish compressor, bought when i didn't know what i was doing)
Spirit Sx Mixer (rubbish, bought when i didn't know what i was doing but it does prove useful although I kinda hate it)

Listening to Noise

Samson Amp (rubbish)
JBL 4208 speakers (I hate these)
Audio Technica Headphones (Great to work with but maybe a bit false in the upper frequencies)

Recording Noise

M-Audio Ozonic (Great controller, middling soundcard)
Soundforge and Ableton 6 are my main weapons (have various plug ins and soft synths but don't use them much)

On ther lust list:

Waldorf Blofeld
Frostwave gear in general
A quality boutique analog delay peddle
A Drawmer compressor, probs a DL221 or 241
New powered speakers (Mackie or Event)
New Mixer (a little Mackie)

aren't those relatively good mixers? :)

I guess it is ok (is it the Folio SX http://www.soundcraft.com/product_sheet.asp?product_id=25 , not one of these :
http://www.soundcraft.com/product_sheet.asp?product_id=27 which are great), back in the day I always wanted this one : http://www.soundcraft.com/product_sheet.asp?product_id=92 but bought a sampler instead...

It is a bit prone to cross-talk, is a little noisy, the gain isn't great and the eq is pants.. .but as something that can mix 20 or so channels together on it isn't bad.. i am comparing it against the Mackie VLZ style mixers which are much better sounding to my ears, lower noise, better gain structure, more usable eq, four groups, instead of a Mix and Sub.

i was lookingf for a medium size mixer and i was thinking about get that new allen & heath zed 14 but lot of people said it's crap...it seems that they just have to cut too much corners to get the price that low

so i start asking people about a decent mixer and finally get a second hand mackie 1202 VLZ2 for $ 100, made in USA (the new VLZ3 series are made in china)...in excellent condition!...i'm really happy with it...it small enough to be portable and the mutes could send the audio of muted channels to headphones, so it's really usefull in a live grooveboxing situation

lol. true. you can't use everything at once. that's just ridiculous. even w/just a couple synths you have more sounds than can fit into any given track. but once you know everything really well and what synth is good at what sounds or what tone you have in your head then you know where to go. plus i find it fun to learn different interfaces as it means i come up w/different music as a result.. but as long as you can put your fingerprint on it then that's that.

the thing w/the elektrons is they integrate easily w/whatever is already in your studio and you can get away from the computer and just jam.

Hi

My humble little corner contains:

Machinedrum SPS-1

Roland SH-101

Roland Juno-106

Alesis Ion, not too sure I like this thing, hoping to replace this with nord lead 3. For truly messed up sounds this thing is beautiful but I think it sounds a bit tinny.. bit like a recording in a toilet :(

Casio VL-Tone

RME Fireface 400.

Logic 8

Ableton Live 7

Reaktor 5

M-Audio Trigger finger

Behringer BCR2000

Nano patch

Yamaha APX700 semi-acoustic guitar

Pair of Adam A7 monitors.

Macbook with 4gb ram, and I'm probably the only person who hates this f*cking OSX piece of crap on this forum. I only did the switch for Logic 8.. (excuse the venting)

Gear not in use:

Yamaha DX7

Korg 01 WFD

-piece

Re:Gear List Thread (you knew it was coming) v.2

Posted by papertiger - 2008/05/06 07:39

but badloop, you didn't list toilet in your set up. . . ? :(

jk.

Here's what the lab contains now:

KRK v6s
RME Fireface
RME OctaMic
SM 57

Monomachine MKII
Machinedrum UW MKII
Virus TI Polar
Blofeld
MPC 1000 with JJ OS 2

Logic 8

It's nearly perfect for me. Switching to the MPC with JJ has been a revelation. No more troubleshooting like I used to when I worked on the computer to sequence. I just turn it on and go and when i'm ready I record the outs of the instruments into Logic 8 and do some mixing. Sometimes vocal recordings.

the mpc with the akai os was totally unuseable for me. i owned one briefly before the jj os and i hated it. it went back. had a friend who told me how bananas jj os 2 was, and i decided to give it another try. aside from the md, it's the best gear purchase i've ever made. the fact that i don't have to fight software, etc. makes me want to learn it like the sweet sweet instrument that it is. . . my precioussssss!

Essentially what I'm using at the moment:

Machinedrum UW MkII
Monomachine SFX-6
Future Retro FR-777
Roland TR-909
(2x) Empirical Labs Distressor EL8-X
Great River MP-2NV
Korg Kaoss Pad 3
Ableton Live 7, Sampler
Pro Tools LE 7.3
Audio Ease Altiverb 6
Izotope Ozone 3, Trash
NI Massive
Genelec 8050A's (my pride and joy at the moment, totally changed the game for me!)
Microtech Gefell UM70S

I just got a very famous film composer's full orchestral sample sets (.exs and Gigastudio sets)... shhhhhh!!! :ohmy:

Of course, there's all the interfaces, etc.

And I've got a mess of other stuff, including a full guitar rig and pedal fx, but frankly, I ain't using much of it at the moment. :blush:

Lookin' to pick up:

Access Virus TI (full 61-key version)
SoundToys Native Bundle (got the demo and whoa! Need to purchase now!)

I'm looking to offload:

Novation Remote 37 SL (definitely)
Native Instruments FM8 and Reaktor (I think)

The Spectralis sounds amazing to me but is going to take me some time to learn.
I think it's great value even with the unfinished OS.
I have sent you a PM about the Doepfer.

there hasn't been really many on the market. i saw one but it was a bit high imo. so i'm kinda holding out.

actually getting great results with the samples hit 'Saturator', then exporting to the ROM's and then using the T-Resonator to beef up. i have a new track i'm about to finish where i employ a lot of this work flow. i will share as soon as it's done.

i fcking love this thing. it's the best thing i have bought since my first Elektron box. perfect companion to the MD/MnM. really warms up the bottom-end. it can do far out shit but i'm more about subtlety. no lie though, that interface takes a minute. i was clueless for days, so i was just tweaking to see what results i could get. now things are clicking.

maybe not for everyone but it's not going anywhere.

Hmmm... tell me more. I'm about subtlety as well... and was wondering how it worked for beefing things up without delays and reverb...

I'd be interested in the feedback knob...turned to the left, which Jomox says at low amounts adds bass ...and at higher amounts creates very deep vibrations like a bass tone.

I used the API 2500 a lot in a studio I used to work at, Nils. It is fantastic, imo. Very versatile. High quality like everything else API makes. It's awesome on the mix buss, but also on any stereo source. It can be very transparent, really nice. But it can also slam with the different thrust settings. Can't go wrong with it, imo.

I'd rather have my stereo Distressors, but my next choice would be the 2500. ;)

I had the M-Res and ultimately got tired of it, I think the lack of modulation options really limited the box. Also, the filter design is one which robs the passband at high resonance (unless you used the +ve feedback, which gives different results).

I'm keen to hear what the concept would sound like in more fully fleshed out form, w/ LFO and delay.

the API is amazing. anything put through it sounds better even w/o any compression going on. it's one of those kinds of boxes. I got it used from vintage king.. it's practically new though.. still had the tags on it!.. but yeah.. it can be very very transparent and it's easy to dial in a just a little compression and let the api op amp do it's thing (which is brilliant). it is great on any stereo source. i've used on a drum mix and i route the 2 mix through it after the dbox for summing. sounds really great. you can use it on mono sources as well but you can't do dual mono. it sounds great on acidic basses and everything really. it's quite versatile. you can really squash stuff and make things really colored if you that's what you're after. i highly recommend the API2500. you just cannot go wrong with it. i bought it on a recommendation from a friend who is a mastering engineer. i had never used on before.. i'd used some manley stuff and some 1176's and distressors all of which is great but this thing is just absolutely perfect.

modular: i use it for everything. some of the standard basic modules are just amazing. the phase/timbre mod module is one of my favs... best distortion ever for drums and really fattens up any synth sound w/o sounding gimmicky or crushed and you can dial in the amount of processing you like adn get CV control over it. i filter a lot of things through it and also route LFO's out to other things and also just jam w/it and record everything i do then edit and make sampler instruments in kontakt or live or logic or just general sample fodder or loops.

synthesis w/a modular is something everyone should experience at some point. the oscillators in the modcan are awesome and bruce is making digital VCO's w/lot's of different waveforms and he's also making looping multi lfo's and envelopes w/many waveshapes.

my system is pretty well balanced between synthesis and processing. i have a handful of oscilaltors and filters/envelopes/lfo's and a handful of processing modules like the analog flanger, sawtooth animator etc.

i use it a lot for fm type stuff because it just gets weird fast. it's great to make growling basses and unison type sounds and just all sorts of modulated mayhem.

Nils wrote:

Wow, and I thought I had a lot of gear :laugh:

;) there's longer gear lists here which i'm glad of. i hate being the only total gearslut but i can honestly say that it all gets used to actually make music and most of it i've had for quite a while.

<http://electro-music.com/forum/topic-24176.html>

I need to hear it first... though even the guitar center in New York City doesn't have one in stock (or even know what it is) - it's very expensive. I've not heard a demo online that wasn't colored by bad compression and there is a grating frequency that bugs me out in a bad way. I need to hear it in the flesh to make sure before I really decide.

I like simple instruments that do a few things very well. The nord offers enough for me combined with other gear (monomachine as sequencer?). I'd basically be loading a lot of my own samples and slices. It's just so expensive I'd need to get rid of gear. I'm sort of at a place in my life where I like to keep things minimal and I'm already feeling a bit redundant. (does one man need 3 monos plus a monomachine?) - but I also really like all my gear now.

I know I love Dave Smith instruments and Elektron gear. for Bass the moog has such a classic sound and beautiful craftsmanship that it will be with me for a long time. I like synths that you can add on to down the road... I like that I can build on to like the DSI gear and Voyager. I just bought actual's MEK and hope it's as good and different from the P08 as I remember. Turns out I use polyphony for most things as I jam but the p08 will be cool for most of those needs... The evolver always struck me as a loop machine and the MEK was just the programmer rather than a performance synth - but that's just how I use it. I also plan on using it for FX for the P08!

the revolution is a keeper as well - I always love running a bit of acid through most of my songs and the sequencer is so much fun to jam with. It makes a great replacement for typical guitar lines.

I dig clavia synths so know that I may like the Wave- I've also had a v-synth xt that I sold to fund a computer but would consider that again too considering the price in place of the Wave. I'm intrigued most by the Nord's UI as it looks like fun and is the subtractive model makes sense to me. The Vsynth GT is awesome - but I'm shallow and hate the esthetic of the synth - it too big and the trance (touch) pads and laser beams are goofy.

@ jsrocket

The korg magic is a blessing from synth gods. It's just around the corner and it's full of happiness. Enjoy life. Enjoy!

Hey Megawatt, what are your favorite bits about the Adrenalinn??

I bought the Adrenalinn as a taster box before the Linndrum 2 analog drops... so far it's a keeper as I will use it for FX for monos and my bass guitar.

It's an awesome FX box and drum module. The drums are soooo simple - no tuning or anything but you can feed them into fx for variety in tone. They are such good sounding samples with tons of punch that I'm not finding I need a lot of variety as they compliment the MDUW well - classics are classics. It's easy to trigger them from the MD or to run the preset beats (with sounds changed and certain track muted) for some ancillary beats.

The FX are great - I use it as a front end for the FR revolution and it greatly widens the sonic pallet. I find I get a better sound going from an instrument directly rather than out the FX bus from my mixer but the differences are subtle.

The adrenallin is very well built and very easy to use. The matrix is very clever and I love the fact that Roger has continued to upgrade it. I think that bodes well for the linndrum too...

It's a bit expensive for a pedal but I think it was well worth it considering what you get... you can get some good demos from the Roger linn site.

In short, I just love their major versatility and they sound phenomenal, imo. They can emulate so many of the classic comps, everything from colored to transparent, opto, tube, whatever. You have the harmonic generator modes (2nd or 3rd order), built-in sidechain, and the crazy Nuke ratio. Brilliant, brilliant piece of gear. Hmm, sounds irresistible, I have to check it out. My cousin (studio owner) also recommended it strongly. Not cheap though (I need a stereo version) :S

I'm really a newbie in this area, so I'm a little reluctant to spend a lot of money on something that I can't utilize properly. But people keep telling me that sound quality and money are very proportional in this market... I'm really looking for something that makes my sound (a lot) less sterile, so I was considering something with tubes, like the TL Audio C1, or something that also houses a preamp to make the sound warmer. Don't think I can afford an all-tube solution like Tube-Tech. But the Distressor(s) sound like they have this ability. I'm not preoccupied with clean sound, I want something that really colors.

I'm also considering the Neve Portico 5043. Do you have any experience with this? Or the 5042 tape saturator from the same series? Any opinions welcome :)

Re:Gear List Thread (you knew it was coming) v.2

Posted by ThinkTanx - 2008/05/11 08:13

No experience with the Portico stuff. I've heard the C1 is a great bargain, but don't have experience with it either. I'd say what you've been told is spot-on. Price and quality are pretty proportionate generally. There are some exceptions like the FMR Audio stuff, the RNC and the RNLA. But then again, those won't give you the versatility that the API or the Distressors will.

Btw- I've got stereo EL8-X Distressors. I bought them second hand for around $2600, I think. They don't generally come much cheaper. They retain their value very, very well. Kinda like the Elektron gear, in that sense. You should have a look around the classifieds on GearsLutz. There is always lots of high-end stuff for sale, and some times at very good prices.

unfortunately no. there's no where around here to try one. i'd have to buy and hope it's all i'd like it to be. i suppose i could return it if it did not live up to my hopes. with the baby due in 6 weeks, nows not the time for $1300.00 outboard gear...i know you can understand :)

i have read man reviews, and have perused some forums and it seems to get high marks everywhere. for me the big deal is you have modern reliance and small form factor. if this unit does truly replicate most of the beauty of tape but without all the hassle, then its worth the dollars. it will be a while before i am able to get one of these but i do see one in my future.

I certainly do ;) But after I started making money my gear lust has become insane :silly:

About the 5042; I just heard that one of Norway's mastering gurus didn't think much of it and sold it quickly. Not that it needs to matter to us though. I'm considering the 5043, API 2500, TL Audio C-1 and Empirical Labs Distressor. But before forking out that kind of money I need to do some serious research. It's silly buying this kind of gear in Norway, when I can save up to $1000 buying it from the States. No return policies though ;)

Btw my studio is due to be finished in a couple of weeks. As is the baby :laugh:

MD-UW MK2 (in a couple of days)
Dave Smith Evolver desktop (honestly, the only synth I need)
Mac Mini running Ableton Live 7 suite (Sampler is a huge part of my arsenal)
MOTU Ultralite
2 Shure SM-57's for recording the household sounds that make up 90% of my music
CME 88 weighted key controller
Akai MPD-24
pots, pans, knives, forks, breathing, rain, bread dough, DVD's, etc. as sound sources

It's a simple setup that makes me extremely happy, and contains more sound design potential than I have even thought of at this point. I have owned much bigger studios, and all I achieved was getting bogged down.

It's actually very nice, you just have to find it's sweet-spot and you're on!
It's a little noisy but nothing terrible (though I've read that they're all different in the noise dep.)

Anyways, it's pretty cool little compressor, got it for ca. $20 on ebay :lol:

batni still has hers. . . but she never sells aaaanything. =P

I sold it because with the ti and the blofeld, it was overkill. I don't want that many polysynths. i know they both have different sounds, but i would have to learn both. personally, i liked the interface on the blo more than the ti, but the ti's sound and effects kill -- it's just a far more sophisticated (and concomitantly expensive!!) machine.

i did get sad when i packed the blo up and almost reconsidered, but i know that she is going to a good home, to someone who is really excited to get her.

there're just too many fun things out there. . . and now i've discovered guitar pedals! =O

So, I've totally changed up my shit. Got the TI a couple of days ago. I gotta get a two-tier keyboard stand. The bottom shelf is gonna have my SFX-6, as it does now. On the top shelf I'm gonna put a shelf with my 777 and TR-909 on it. I really wanna get a keyboard stand with rollers. Anyone heard of such a thing?

Cheers! :)

What about the API 2500??

No worries though, the Drawmer is a great compressor too!

Re:Gear List Thread (you knew it was coming) v.2

Posted by Nils - 2008/05/26 14:43

Yeah, it's the Mercenary Ed.

I haven't found more than one API second hand (at a high price) , and I got a much better price on a Drawmer here in Norway. Price is (sadly) a very decisive factor for me.

Buying from the States seems very tempting when you look at the exchange rate, but usually it'll cost 35-40% more due to shipping and taxes. The API would have cost me around $2800, a Distressor pair around $3000, and the Drawmer was around $1800.

I like the fact that the 1968 has valves (gimmickry??), a "big" switch for better bass response (like on the API?) and dual mono as well as stereo operation (unlike the API).

Anyway, this is a process that's just started for me, so if I'm not happy with the 1968 I'll sell it and save up for a pair of Distressors.

Any opinions on the Fatso Jr?

i think i have finally settled down with the kit i need and here it is:

machinedrum sps1 uw mk1 !!!

monomachine sfx 60 mk1 !!!

these are the balls and brains of my setup

access virus ti polar

x0xb0x

yamaha cs 01

yamaha vss 30

casio sk 1

cheetah md 16 (for sale)

lexicon mpx 550 (for compression mostly)

korg kp3

roland re 201 space echo

mackie 1202 mixer

lots of circuit bent toys, keyboards, drum machines and pedals that i don't really use as much as i used to:blush:

i record live with no editing through an m-audio firewire 1814 into live 6 on my little black macbook and erase most of what i make after a listen or two.
the polar has changed a lot of things for me, i've only had it for a couple of weeks but it's the most powerful and fun synth i've ever owned. had a spectralis for a bit but traded it for the polar (someone on this board is having fun with that beast now) i gotta say it's been really hard narrowing down what i will really will use and i've bought, sold and traded a shitpile of gear over the last six or nine years. is there a thread detailing people journey through kit to get to where they are now with their setup?

I'm very happy with my set up now -

Nord Wave - Multi synthesis - samples, FM, Waves, VA
MnM - Sequencing plus internal sounds
MDUW - drum machine and percussion provider
MEK - Hybrid bliss
Voyager RME - Analog Kicks and bass
FR Revolution - Oh Acid - sequencing the Voyager
Adrenalinn - FX for the monos + drum machine
K01 - melodies via neat scale function in the living room I keep a small fortified Nintendo tower of 8 bit dreams.

My favorite 8 bit gear is midines. My favorite synth on a game system is the upcoming Korg DS10

i think you'll be happy w/the drawmer. it gets hi marks from lot's of people. i was weighing the 1968 vs api 2500 and ended up w/the api because i found a used one that was essentially new for a good price w/full warranty etc. plus a friend has the api and i was able to get lot's of info/samples from him etc.

either way. i think once you get into this league of compressor that there is no bad one. it's just finding the sound you that works for you... and honestly i think there are a half dozen compressors in that price range that will get the job done nicely.

oh, the tubes in the 1968 are no gimmick and having dual mono capability is great.

i got the dl4 but am returning it. i like it ok, but this:

<http://www.eventide.com/AudioDivision/Products/StompBoxes/TimeFactor.aspx> has some serious midi implementation that knocks my sox off and will expand usability. i could parameter lock the delay settings via the mono or just tweak away -- nice to have options. plus it's upgradeable. I'm picking one up tomorrow and will let you know how it goes!

thanks for the echo pro tip -- in terms of ergonomics how things are set up (I still need to take a pic!) a rack unit wouldn't be ideal for me. i realized that after researching guitar pedals at 3 am. lol. still though, the echo pro is pretty sweet. i wonder why line 6 stopped making them.

i feel you. i find it hilarious sometimes to think about all the gear i have bought and sold to get to where i am at. there should be a thread about the gear journey. but it kind of gives me a headache to think about it.

i do know that my set-up is exclusively revolved around the performance aspect right now. i don't even have an audio interface at the moment. believe it or not i am more productive now than ever.

that's funny, i've been shifting from a live setup to a studio and have'nt felt more inspired and productive. i still dream of an esx1/emx1/kp3/sp404 live setup for just straight slamming tweaky techno. i like the idea of a gear list of stuff people have had and loved or not loved and sold or traded over the years. there are prolly a lot more stories in that than a current gear list. i know personally there are a couple things i let go of that i don't even want to think about let alone share with the world. might be good catharsis though...

+ a minty Baldwin Funster organ over here.

neighbor was garage selling and just gave it to me. sounds great. reminds me of Alive Coltrane's sound. has built-in reverb, vibrata, and rhythm machine. fun times soon.

Haha, great! I can't count all the organs I've gotten in flea markets, from relatives, colleagues etc, played for a few hours, then ripped their guts out (springs, drum machines, rotating speakers etc) :silly: Whatever you do, keep the 'verb, they're fantastic.

wow, i must be tired. i was thinking about Alice's death while i was writing that and out came Alive. anyway, the tonality of the Funster is very much like her 'Universal Consciousness' record. she definitely didn't use the Funster on that album, as the funster came out much later.

too soon to rip it apart. though grabbing the reverb and drum machine out of it sounds pretty rad.

Not sure if it's a stayer, since it has a couple of major flaws (only fully programmable from software, FM engine only monotimbral, truly ugly box), but it has enough goodies at the price to be very interesting (6-operator FM, multimode filter. step sequencer with "motion recording", knobs).

I've had this txt file on my harddrive for a while so I guess it's about time I actually post it. The thing is that I have to much gear for my own liking, but some day I'll slim it down. Papertiger thinks I'll take about five years to decide what to get rid of, and I'm inclined to agree. :blush:

Instruments:

Machinedrum UW

Monomachine SFX-6

SidStation

Blofeld

Evolver

EMX-1

MPC1000 (JJ OS incoming)

Software:

Renoise 1.9.1

Live 7

Reaktor 5
Reason 4
ReCycle 2.1
Kore 1
Audacity
Milkytracker

Studio gear:

RNC
Solo 110
SM58
AW1600
Adam A7
Beyerdynamic DT990
Sennheiser eH250
Zoom H4
Kore 1 (controller and soundcard)
Homemade desktop PC with lots of storage.
A Macbook with a broken fan.
microKontrol
TM-1 (x 2)
Logitech G11 (for tracking purposes.)

As of mid August I'm planning on giving the all hardware workflow a go. It should be an exciting endeavor, but time will tell how well it'll all work out.

I think I could really be pretty happy with just the MD-UW and maybe one synth. Something small with keys like a Microkorg. You can mangle the output of the synth so radically with the MD that you don't really need anything too fancy.

that's a great point. you can do a ton with just elektron gear. or just an md or mnm. there's been a couple times where i've sold off all my synths/keyboards/efx and just had elektrons around. it was nice (and looking at that gear list i posted, i'm contemplating it again) but i do love being inspired in different ways by different instruments, even if they share similarities in many ways. and having a handful of sonic options means it'll take longer to get bored with any one of them. that's my experience, at least.

yeah,
also what's good about many instruments is that they don't always have to be in the spotlight, they can just do little things each..

the MD+MnM can be an overload sometimes (cut 'em some slack :))

sfx-6 and mpc 1k w/ jj here and a bunch of fx stomps. i use the mpc for drums/samples because i like chopping up loops and such. i also like programming stuff on the mono and taking a snapshot of the sound in various states so that i can reverse it, chop it, rearrange it etc.. often times i program my electronic drums in the MnM and sample them to allow me to use the mono in poly mode. if i have a noise osc that i modulate to sound like a dynamic hi-hat or snare pattern then i just sequence the 2 bar loop and then sample that. i actually use the input through on the mpc so that the sfx-6 is always running through the mpc's inputs ready to be sampled. you can go a long way with a sampler, synth and some fx.

It's a great combination, of course, although I found that getting all my sounds out of Elektron gear tended to be a little overwhelming, since the Elektron sound character is so sharp and digital and punchy.

this is basically where i am, and lovin' it (if i had any damn time!). resampling/sampling the elektrons in the mpc let's you impose a different sort of sound character so that not quite everything sounds the same . . . i find the elektrons and mpc to be very complimentary. and hell yes for using the mono in poly mode -- that's actually where most of my mono userwave time has been spent so far! =>

Yeah. MM in poly mode is a great instrument. I kind of hate to eat up the entire machine in one patch but some of those sounds with long overlapping release tails can be gorgeous.

I'd love to see Elektron come out with a polymachine some day. Could be exactly the same box only with 6x6 voices.

i did, twice even! sold it. i love the effects in that box and it's a great synth but it's just not needed in my setup anymore. i so really need this big lush sounds and when i do i can just reach for Circle, Massive, or whatever. the new MnM waves are no Ti but its nice to get tones with more body in that box.

I like it less and less as time goes on. I consider it more a useful instrument than an inspiring one. Having 16 parts with dedicated effects in a unit the size of the TI desktop is pretty handy, especially in trying to put together a live rig, but the sounds just don't do it for me most of the time. The underlying sound character is flat and by the time you've tarted it up with a bunch of effects it starts to sound cheesy and, let's admit it, trancey.

Compare this to the Nord Lead 2x, with 1/4th the multimbrality and a fraction of the features, but with a great, lively raw sound I love that always makes me want to play it. I've been working on getting some live material together just with the Nord and the MD-UW most recently, when I'm not hunkered down in Ableton.

I keep feeling that I should sell the TI but I haven't yet just because I feel that I still might need it sometime.

i think this does sums up the Ti for me as well. sounds good, incredible possibilities but not very inspiring or really fun. i wouldn't say it's bad by any means but i just feel out of love with it. then bought another one and realized it's not just a fad, i'm over that box.

i guess i just realized i can use a softy for those needs for now.

Nope... that would be expensive and / or a pain in the ass. Not really willing to deal with vintage. Would love an SP1200...but will never own one. The other two I'm not interested in due to them either being too big (60) or too old (ie SP12).

And I think I'm about to go exclusively Pro Tools for a bit. 7.4 has everything I get out of Ableton, it seems easy enough to use, and it sounds infinitely better. Unfortunately, I fuckin hate Digidesign! :S

we all hate digi. however, if you are used to using the pro tools there is no switching. plus their sh!t works. they are very good with updating the software. they might take 3 years to make a 10.5 compatible version of their software but it'll work. the new elastic audio might have ripped off ableton in a way, but man that sh!t sounds amazing. the sound quality and control is ace.

i track vox, guitars and such that involve miking. i would never even think about tracking and editing in any other program. without the playlists and editing workflow i am taking a step back.

don't get me wrong, i use Live, but more as an efx processor. and i have been getting away from the box in the creative stages more and more.

i keep threatening to do an album to tape, but i guess that will happen when i have the budget to buy a tape machine and a neve or api console. might be a few years.

i track vox, guitars and such that involve miking. i would never even think about tracking and editing in any other program. without the playlists and editing workflow i am taking a step back.

don't get me wrong, i use Live, but more as an efx processor. and i have been getting away from the box in the creative stages more and more.

Yep. I with ya 100% all around.

I have to have Pro Tools for all the post-production work I do. Plus, I came up using Pro Tools. I learned digital/computer recording using PT 5. Honestly, 7.4 is the first thing that has excited me about PT since then.

You ever ReWire Live into PT?? I've tried it once or twice but it didn't do a lot for me. Wasn't sure if I was missing something. Now, with the Elastic Audio feature, there seems little reason to.

Yep, though I'm not sure the Linndrum is my style yet. I'm not sure about the 888 as well yet. The MDUW is such a nice machine, a part of me is thinking that I should just keep spending my time with it exclusively. However, the other side of me says why not cheat on the MDUW and make some analog sounding stuff. The way I look at it is that I like playing with drum machines like other like to play with synths and guitars. One synth is enough for me, but one drum machine may not be. :cheer:

8 steps, 5 channels. It's called Kawai School Rhythmer. It's huge, obviously made for schools and institutions.

Sounds: Typical home organ, slightly more depth, but not very exciting. I would like to modify it with trigger outputs for each channel, to control external gear. But I haven't managed to find any info about it on the net, and without the schematics I'm not sure I want anyone to start messing with it.

If anyone has any info on it, I'd love to know.

Synths and Drum Machines:

Jomox 888
Monomachine MKII
Machinedrum UW MKII
Yamaha Tenori-On
Nintendo DS with Korg DS10
Jomox M-Base01

Effects: Jomox T-Resonator

Toys: Korg K01, Gakken SX150, Gameboy with Camera

Macbook with Apogee Duet running Logic 8 and Live 7

Misc: Mackie Mixer, Elektron TM-1, Dynaudio BM5as, M-Audio BX10 Sub
Mics: AT3035 and a Shure SM7 with a SE Reflection Filter

I feel I'm pretty much set at this point.

How's the SE Reflection Filter? I've heard some say it's great (mostly magazine reviews which really can't be trusted at all) and others say it made little to no difference. Of course, the room it is in would make a big difference.

Haha, I knew that would get a chuckle...

The SE reflection filter is incoming as is the Shure SM7b and the Duet. These were all bought in hopes of getting a better vocal sound in my crap room. On Gearslut, multiple people state that the SE in an untreated room it is a lot better than nothing...but they said it is not a substitute for a treated room. I figured it could not hurt my crap vocal sound and I have to take a chance on it. The mic needs to be placed in the proper position...there is a sweet spot. I figure that with the SM7b being dynamic, the SE filter, and the duet pre's providing 70db of gain (for the SM7b)...things could get better for me in my crap room. We'll see if it actually works out.

Yeah, the SM7 is usually perfect for rap vocals. I'll be interested to hear what you think about the Reflection Filter when you get it.

just saying.. if you really want the voyager then you'll still want it after you get a LP. though the LP is a dope synth and will give you plenty of moog flavorificness. my friend just got one and she loves.

I've bought and sold a lot... I mean a hell of a lot of cool stuff. However, my current set-up allows me to make music in the way I really want to...so, with that in mind, it informs my views of other gear. I know what I would use and what would sit around at this point. I also know what would distract me from accomplishing anything. Sure, there is a lot of cool shit, but nothing worth buying for my needs and skill level...and it isn't about lack of cash. I could buy nicer stuff, but it just isn't going to benefit my music at this point.

Re:Gear List Thread (you knew it was coming) v.2

Posted by CircusofMind - 2008/10/29 02:50

I am not talking specifically of sound generating gear, but more about processing.

There is always another EQ, comp, pre-amp, effects unit, etc that would easily help make all my gear a bit better with no learning curve or lessened productivity.

I understand you about sticking with a system that works and not getting too G.A.S.-sy - especially if music is getting written. I personally just find the music process gets more enjoyable, and hence I write better music when a simple element helps my sound get more refined.

When I bought the API 2500, I wrote 3 tracks in a row over a couple weekends (which is a lot for me) just because the tone I got out of this comp was so inspiring.

I am not trying to say you or anyone else should have constant gear lust, I just think it is a bit silly to say that there is no good gear out there that would benefit your music.

If there is not gear that is worth the cost, that is a different story.

All in all, I understand you JSR. I also feel a stability in my setup which has tamed any gear lust. But if someone were to offer me a cheap Culture Vulture, or a couple of cheap Distressors, I would snatch them up in a second.

Re:Gear List Thread (you knew it was coming) v.2

Posted by jsrockit - 2008/10/29 05:11

Oh...COM, believe me... I do have that kind of stuff in mind, but we generally don't talk of pre-amps and stuff of that nature here. I will be buying a new pre-amp soon (Daking or Great River). And when I say that there is no good gear that would benefit my music, that is not from the standpoint that I think my music does not need help...it is quite the opposite. I feel I need to really keep using the stuff I have to make my music / recording / mixes better... since it is good enough and I haven't maxed out its potential. So what I'm really trying to say is that I don't feel like spending the money now...I'm not dying to get something.

I TOTALLY agree with jsrockit.

Whenever I get a GAS attack I always try to think about the way the new gear could benefit my music, compared to the gear I already have.

Since using this "philosophy" I've really started focusing on the tools I already have and as a consequence I believe the quality of my music has improved enormously.

New gear can be really distracting sometimes.

Its true. There is always more to learn with the gear that we have.

However, there is no point in which we can master the gear we have either.

I like to remind myself from time to time, that many project studios these days have fancier gear than gear used in some of the most famous albums of all time.

Its a fine line. All you need is a piano, and that is a lifetime of work.

Throw in some elektron gear and the possibilities are endless...

Limitations are sometimes a blessing.

A painter can never master one color. But adding some other colors to the pallet will only expand creative possibilites.

I've always been into the fairly minimalist setup (especially when it comes to electronic music gear like synths and drum machines), but you have an interesting take on it there COM. I kinda like it. :)

Actually I'm thinking a second Jazzmaster (I just bought a '59 Reissue Thin Skin two weeks ago) for alternate tunings, a Moog MF-104Z Delay, a Moog Ring Mod, a Pro Co Rat, Devi Ever Shoegazer, an Empress Tremolo, and a Swart Space Tone Reverb. :(

On the bright side, I'm selling a Jimmy Page Les Paul, a silver face Twin Reverb, and several other pedals.

It's still gonna cost me though. Probably $1500 or so. :unsure:

Try to keep things as minimal as possible for live stuff (see *)

MDUW mk1*

Virus Indigo 2*

Blofeld*

behringer bcf fader controller *
mackie 1602 mixer*

Korg ea1 (mainly for sequencing and echo)
Bassstation rack
Vermona phaser
Emu Morpheus
midiverb 2
small stone phaser
mackie 624 monitors

Ivory 2 compressor

002 rack pro tools powerbook reason 3 (rarely used now)

just off to buy a kenton midi merge so I can do more detailed sequencing in the studio.

trying to simplify a bit...

main gear:
elektron mduw and mnm mkii's
cwejman s1mkii and a handful of cwejman/doepfer modules
roland sh5
korg ms20 with moogerfooger cp251 add-on microkorg
monome 40hse and 256

extras (used from time to time):
some craptastic casio keyboards
a few bell kits/glockenspiels wurlitzer 200a
melodica

misc:
drum kit
mics
live
max/msp
logic
motu ultralite mki
alesis monitor one mkii's
macbook pro
soundcraft compact
a handful of fx pedals

nice studio Chiasticon. Your drum playing and recording/mixing sounds superb. Play drums myself and want to incorporate it into some of my tracks. I find it a big contrast going between real drums and a machine drum. Have you ever tried triggers?

Re:Gear List Thread (you knew it was coming) v.2

Posted by chiasticon - 2008/11/20 19:02

thanks liveseq! it's definitely a contrast writing between the two. machinedrum usually has me making more "techno" beats whereas on live drums i just play straight-up grooves.

never tried triggers. i've enjoyed using electronic pads before tho (like the roland spd-s). i'd like to try an electronic kit sometime and have it trigger a machinedrum. sooo expensive tho!

Re:Gear List Thread (you knew it was coming) v.2

Posted by chiasticon - 2008/11/21 02:53

hageir: nope. you're thinking of the vx-351 expander (or vx-351 for rack mount). the cp-251 just has cv i/o and adds an lfo, two attenuators, a multiple, lag processor, sample/hold and a four-way mixer to my ms-20 :) really comes in handy; even for little things like just attenuating the ultra-loud noise coming from the ms-20. it's also much cheaper (but slightly less full featured ;)) than buying an ms-50.

You are right. It's amazing for Jazzy D'n'B type stuff, ala Roni Size. The Electronic (808) card is good but does not really exploit the R8's ability to sound like a drummer playing a kit rather than a sequencer playing a sample.

I paid more for the Jazz Brush card than the R8, go figure :unsure:

MOTU 896HD

AMT-8

Mackie HR-824 monitors

Metasonix Phattytron PT-1

Quasimidi Sirius

Alesis Andromeda

Sequential Circuits Prophet VS

Future Retro FR-777

Roland TR-606

Roland TR-707

Roland MC-202

Roland S-220

Waldorf Pulse+

Yamaha RM1X

(...and a basic Buchla 200e I'll be ordering in the next few months if my girlfriend's engagement ring doesn't bankrupt me first)

Behringer Virtualizer Pro

Electrix Filter Factory

Electrix Warp Factory

Various guitar pedals and other random garbage.

Unfortunately, my job is so good that it rarely leaves me free time for my synths ;)

Most of my gear (besides the Andromeda which I still constantly create patches on) has been collecting dust for a couple years now actually. No time between work and my other hobbies. Hoping the Machinedrum will re-ignite my interest in producing.

Ok so i went a little gear crazy this past month.....ill probably end up weeding through most of it so yall will probably see some stuff forsale soon...

Synths:

Little Phatty Stage II - i wanted one again, i missed my old one especially since i took the time and money to get wooden sides placed on it :(. to me its just so rich and creamy and harsh all at the same time

Juno 60 - ill more than likely end up keeping this one, although it does have its problems scratchy volume pot, some sliders are a little funky.

Juno 106 - bought on a whim ill see where this fits.

Monomachine MK II - i dont kno if this fits in with my gear i may go back to the machinedrum mk II

Micro X - for some reason this has always been a staple oddly its one of the original piece of gear that i still have when i started to get in the beat making game. i use it mainly for its reg instrument sounds (violin, harpiscord etc.)

Novation Bass Station - haha i have a weird connection to it, ever since i was a teenager when I heard triumph from Wu-Tang and RZA had that line "program fat bass lines on Novation" i have always wanted one (i dont know if its the bass station he is even rhying about)

Microkorg - battery powered and i for one actually like the interface, i think its underrated and hated piece of gear due to it being embraced by hipsters, indie, emo crew but i think if you dig you can def get some good shit out of it.

Samplers/Drum Machine

Roland MS-1 - i dont kno why i still have this i havent used it at all, its a decent portable sampler (which is why i bought it) my plan is to hook it up to my receiver and record stuff off of tv, dvd, whatever.

Akai MPC 2500 - My baby my one and only main arranger, sampler, song constructor

E-MU SP 1200 - Its a shame i havent yet had the time to fall in love with you but i will and like Rick said "never gonna give you up"

Vermona DRM 1 MK III - i am going to pick this bad boy up again from Richmond tonight after i get out of my holiday job. I wanted another drum machine but one with no frills. Thought about the jomox, the md, etc. I ended up with the Vermona because its simple. No sequencer, just knobs and heart well and analog goodness i mean PURE analog goodness.

Misc.

Vestax Controller One - paid 1600.00 for a turntable that has buttons that control pitch/notes but to me worth every penny.

Rane TTM56 - so tired of this damn mixer, the fader block broke on my crossfader, rane sent me new ones free of charge that doesnt even fit (i had to drill the holes deeper) to get the fader to fit and now it bleeds a little very little but sorta still noticeable. i hate you but will love you again once innofader hurrys with the adapter plate so that way innofaders can be placed inside.

Vestax PMC 05 Pro III w/ innofader replaced crossfader - replacement for my Rane until further notice.

Midines - neat havent really gotten into it. word to the wise do not order new as mine is still pending from a purchase in May. I ended up finding a used one to buy as well.

LSDJ - havent used

Mbase01 - kicks kicks kicks

Effects

Korg KP3

dope! i've been wanting on of those since ricci rucker first talked up the concept on the old asisphonics site. hopefully after i move and get settled into my grad program i can use some loan/sholarship/grant $$$ to finally pick one up, kinda hard to justify at the moment as i haven't been scratching nearly as much...

have you seen this video?

Got a new toy yesterday :)

<http://i5.photobucket.com/albums/y189/MikeAR303/Studio/drumulator.jpg>

...and some updated pictures of my studio, which is finally getting close to once again being complete. Just waiting on new stands for my studio monitors, a new 3-tier keyboard stand for my still-in-storage drum machines, modules, and keyboards, and a new rack for the rest of my rack gear that is sitting in boxes. Also ordered some Apogee A/D boxes to add some much needed I/O to the studio. Waiting for MOTU Volta to come out so I can use my 24i to control some of my older gear.

Science... :blink:

Sheesh...

I've got a Lemur on the way. The Jazzmutant elves are apparently working overtime trying to meet demand.

I'll update Ableton once they iron out a few issues.

I'd also like a new KK Audio desk and a new 8-Core Mac Pro.

Might grab an APC40 as well, depending on how I get on with the Clip Launcher on the Lemur. Somebody at Jazzmutant said they are working on a new Clip Launcher, which mimics the APC40, so hopefully that surfaces sooner rather than later. :)

If I'm being real greedy, I'd like another preamp to go with my Great River, but that's probably down the line a ways...

hey THINKTANX, the TO is super fun on the road and great for jotting down ideas. and it's sequencer and Modes allow quite a bit of creative scope. If you're the type of person who likes to play in the park, in a log cabin, on the train OR need an instrument that runs on batteries and fits in a backpack, the TO is pretty good (i'm so over making tunes on a laptop). It is NOT a monomachine, and it is toy-like BUT I've been on the road for 9 months and the TO has really been a friend while away from the studio.

I know serious musos often dis the TO.
life is too serious and whatever floats ya bout i say!

Could you maybe post some kind of a short review of the Moog delay? I'm a big fan analog delays and i have always wanted try the MF-104z myself! Obviously i have already read many reviews and seen/heard many demos of it, but would be nice to hear your opinion since i already know (a little) what type of music you make.

I just got it yesterday and to me it is nothing special (and it should be for $500 used) outside the length of the delay. To me, it doesn't sound any better than the $200-300 delays. I will use it more and let you know what I think. Sounded great on MD snares though.

I'll echo (no pun intended) this sentiment. I've had mine for about 6-7 months now. It's nice. Looks great, feels great. Sounds nice. But for me, I don't know if it's worth the money really. I just don't end up utilizing my pedals much. Just how I work, I guess. I actually like my SoundToys Echoboy plugin a whole lot! :)

Posted by 22tape - 2009/07/09 13:44

well, i love the moog delay. if you're not using its CV's and feedback loop options it's definitely not worth it. the malekko 600 bright is great if you don't need the flexibility. but yeah, you're paying for the flexibility...which i use to the fullest and value dearly.

pump the input level, put a few fx in its feedback loop...use ANYTHING to modulate the CV's...seriously, blast any kind of audio into the CV's for audio rate modulation of the parameters... :ohmy:

and me loves it dark lush echos!

...and yes, I know my monitors are not optimally placed. They are my "B" monitors for a/b comparisons. I have 2 pairs of Adam A7 monitors on the way for quadraphonic work with the 200e.

Still have a pair of HR824s for sale if anyone is looking ;)

I also think it's interesting to see what kind of random stuff people have around the studio. it's just a list, it's not like i'm trying to impress all of these people rocking buchlas, moogs, viruses, jupiters etc with my speak and spell and nintendo DS. They're my first and only set of monitors so I don't really have much to compare it to, but I really like the A7s. I find them to be quite accurate and detailed for the most part, especially at lower volumes. They are very much near-field monitors though... the sweet spot feels kind of small to me. It isn't really much of a problem for me though... my gear setup doesn't occupy much more than a mid-sized desk and adjacent rack, but I might feel different if they had to fill a bigger space. Hope that helps...

In the darkness is a mono mk2 anniversary, MDUW mk2, Korg R3, Nord Micromodular, Minicommand and dubious tube distortion pedal.

Incoming is a mopho which will complete my travel setup as I cant carry anything else home...

Back home is a monomachine sfx6, jomox xbase 09, Evolver desktop and a half full (or empty) Doepfer g6.

Yeah its a pretty cool bit of kit; way better than my skills can push it, i love it!

Its amazing in good light, in low level light it struggles a bit more as the grain pushes right up as soon as you look at the ISO. Its good if things are still and you can hold the lense open with a low ISO, if not expect grain.

I've lost my GAS for synths... what's wrong with me? I think I may be falling in love and photography is becoming important again. Your list, TT, gives me anxiety. I could never be a professional... I can't work with a lot of tools.

Re:Gear List Thread (you knew it was coming) v.2

Posted by ThinkTanx - 2009/10/09 07:07

I don't lust for synths at all any more either, JS.

Some of the stuff on that list rarely gets used or isn't even hooked up (the Axiom, for example, is just for traveling/portability purposes). A lot of the software synth stuff is just stuff I've gotten for free from friends who are sponsored and whatnot. I rarely use that stuff either (and that list actually could have been longer... ughhh...).

Embarassingly, I'm hardly using my Elektron gear these days. I've really gotten into using the drum racks in Ableton. :unsure:

I'll never get rid of my Elektron gear, but I could really kill with just Ableton, the SoundToys fx and my guitar gear. Be a lot more clear-headed too. :blink:

I've been writing a lot lately (go here) and putting together a label/possibly buying into an already established one, so I've barely been making any music anyway.

With my place pitch black and my computer displays turned off, the LEDs and displays on my gear provide enough light that I could pretty much comfortably read a book if I wanted.

The LEDs alone make it worth the money ;)

Slimmed down even more...

Monomachine, Machinedrum UW, Korg EMX-1, Jomox MBase11
Macbook Pro w/ Live and Logic
Apogee Duet + Mackie Mixer
Adams A5 Monitors
Shure SM7B

There's a part of me that really wants a setup like this. Different gear options, but you get the point...

MD, MnM, Virus, Voyager
Macbook w/ Live and PT
Interface, patchbay, preamp, compressor
Genelec 8050A Monitors
Microtech Gefell UM 70
Guitar, Line6 Pod, one distortion, one delay

Chuck everything else out the window... and one of those synths could go too, but, at the moment it would probably be the MnM and I can't bear to part with it.

PC and Laptop with Live, UAD2 Quad, RME Multiface 2 w/ ADAT extension, APC40, MIDI keyboards..
Akai MPC1000
Beer soaked Akai AX-60
Machinedrum UW
Jomox Xbase 999 (on its way in the mail :))
Mopho
Technic 1200 pair with eclair mixer
Fender guitar and bass
Bunch of random percussion crap
Some mics
Good beer
Good bourbon
Ton of old vinyl

Jealous of all the quality gear you lot have :cheer:

Honestly, it is the happiest I've been with a set-up. The EMX-1 and MBase play so well with the elektrons and fill in all the gaps that I don't have GAS for anything. The EMX was the missing piece...crazy as that seems.

i haven't sold any gear yet, but i've been using a very slim version of my set up and it's the best and most productive i've felt in a long time.

monomachine + machinedrum + virus classic + nord lead 2x

eventide eclipse + KP3x2

shure SM58

great river pre

zed 14 mixer

apogee ensemble

Allright I might as well just get it out of my system.. ;)

MD/UW MKII
Clavia Modular G2
Doepfer Dark Energy (gonna expand into a full analog modular system later)
Nord Electro 2 (don't use it much)
Moog Etherwave Theremin
Jazzmutant Lemur
Rodec/Sherman Restyler
Blackbook
Live 8 + all the addon synths and samplers (and max4live in a few days)
MOTU Ultralite MKI
Elektron TM-1
Novation reMote SL MKI
M-audio Triggerfinger
M-audio Axiom 25
Adam A7 monitors
Japanese vintage "squire-esque" guitar. (Doesn't sound very good, but has lots of personality)
Old upright piano (approx. from WW1 but in tune and sounds great in a broken way)
Fender Aerodyne bass
Polish melodica
Boss DD-20 delay
MXR Blowtorch (great bass distortion)
Ashdown bass overdrive (not so great...)
2 Wiimotes (yeah - you CAN do real non-gimmicky stuff with those :p) iPhone (lots of fine small synths for sampling in the MD or Live)

Aahhh - that's better...

Gone are the Monomachine and Ebbe und Flut. :(

New kids on the block: Voyager RME, CP-251, VX-352, MF-102 and MF-104Z. Proper patch cables on order and should arrive this week. Until then I'm making do with whatever instrument cables I have lying around.

happy to report i've gone almost two years with no new gear! consider me satisfied. last piece JoMoX T-Resonator.

wait, wait, i did pick up Komplete 5 when it was on sale for like $250.00 or whatever last summer. i have a feeling this year will be different with the Octatrack and OP-1 on the horizon.

Nice! I got an APC40 last year, but that's it really. Well, I got one or two software doodads but no hardware synths or anything. I do need a new laptop this year. And I'll definitely be getting the Octatrack, of course.

Btw - my music grew leaps and bounds last year... coincidence? :side:

The Synthex is interesting...definitely a little 'acid box'. I haven't had more than 10 minutes with it though, so can't really comment yet. Trying to sell all three of those pedals before I get into them and won't want to sell them. I already have an acid chain i've been working with that I really don't want to mess with right now...and those graphex/synthex/morphex units just scream my name every time I'm in the studio...total distraction! They are all reallllly well built.

I've had more time with the Graphex...and I like it a lot...the trigger lets you almost re-sequence a 303 pattern running through it...where a trigger is seen, the 303 note will play, but where it's not, the 303 not gets ducked. Net effect: plug your 606 into the trigger input and use the 606's sequencer (or your MD's impulse machine,etc.) to 're-sequence' your 303 pattern to better fit a tight groove. hard to explain but a worthy tool.

The Rozzbox...well... what can I say? Most 'character piece' I've ever owned. I have a strong emotional bond with it, and I only bring it out when I'm really feeling something emotionally I need to get out. The first track I did with it was for my girlfriend at the time. I can honestly say, it directly contributed to my desire to marry her...

<http://matrixsynth.blogspot.com/2008/04/wrapping-rainbows-shagghi-rozzbox-demo.html>

How many synths can you say THAT about. The Rozz is quirky to 'get around on'...but man...who the fug cares...it's one of those synths that you don't mold to fit your song...rather, you let it play what IT wants to do, and mold YOUR track to IT...it's THAT kind of an experience. There's a nice sequencer, a BBD delay, a sweepable bit reducer, and hack over drive, and 4 tubes inside..add it all up, and there's totally nothing like it out there...the 'best' of the digital world, and analog tube microphonix warmth. Some of the best PPG like brass ever. Amazingly perfect organ patches (tubes, go figure)...and really awesome noisefloor stuff that when compressed makes for a monster of synth.

Bad things? Tubes need time to warm up. Doesn't always tune to 440 very well. Hard to find one for sale now. Can be un-ruley and quite painful in the distorted/dirty areas...thing metasonix, but sometimes even dirtier. After all... "Rozz Box" means 'Dirt Box' in German...

Not sure that Killian is going to stay in business much longer though... haven't spoken with him in several months actually.

re: rozzbox... they're not being made anymore, unfortunately. it's QUITE an unruly synth but one that i miss. i agree that you can really really get some interesting sounds out of it, but the interface is also infuriating and it's easy to lose all your hard work or get lost in what the hell is actually happening/what you want to change. esp when you're like "oh my god!?! why does it sound like complete hell now!?!"

anyway, despite that i do miss the great sounds i got out of it. i'd like to have another go at it someday. reminds me of the OSCar in a way; tho not implemented nearly as well (despite being made 25 years later).

Thanks, yeah I dream about an MD now and then... but I'm done buying now for a while, barring a big sell off.

Going to try to keep it simple this time.

MPC 1000 w/ JJOS
Machinedrum UW MK II
Monomachine MK II
Kurzweil K2000r - using only for the sounds/presets
Korg Micro X - would like to swap for a Triton Rack also only for presets some minor tweaking
Rane TTM56 - will probably swap out for an Ecler Hak 380
Vestax Controller One Turntable
Jomox Mbase 11 - possibly if the seller gets back to me

Mixers/effects

Mackie Onyx 1620 - selling to buy 2 or 3 Mackie Onyx Blackbirds (rack interface) (reduce studio size)
Boss Re-20 - echo & reverb stuff
Korg KP3
Alesis Bitrman
Lexicon MX400
Alesis Compressor
DBX Compressor
Axiom 49 Pro

Line 6 Guitar Pod Rack - one of the few things left from when i was playing in a band.

All of this stuff runs into logic studio 8

Looking at this list still seems like there is just way to much shit

I do want to add maybe just one or two more things

Octatrack - just because i like having 2 samplers in my setup
Moog Slim Phatty w/ future retro orb - simply to have a nice analog synth.

Re:Gear List Thread (you knew it was coming) v.2

Posted by Logeek - 2010/12/13 13:36

In order of hoarding...
1957 Gibson Es-125,
1971 Fender Rosewood Telecaster
1973 Martin D-35s
Mesa/Boogie 50 Caliber+
CryBaby Wahwah

Johnson Beginner's Banjo Kit
Stelling Sunflower Resonator Banjo bigass fast i-mac
motu Ultralite 10.14
Dynaudio BM5A active nearfield monitors
Sennheiser HD 280 Pro

Logic 8
Nord Stage EX
Shure SM57

Live8
Kala Concert Ukulele
upgraded to Live Suite
DwarfKraft "The Great Destroyer"
Ibanez Overdrive Pro TS-808 Tube Screamer
MXR "Carbon Copy" analog delay
Machinedrum SPS-1UW+MKII...

and I covet big time:
Dark Energy Mono-analog synth or some other, perhaps modular analog synth old fender 57' delux or perhaps some new 12 watt boutique tube amp a separate 15" speaker and cabinet to add to my combo set-up to get that lowdown sound on my tele.
Perhaps some kind of roland Bass combo amp to use for my electro set up live shows
Gold top Les Paul
Mackie 1604-VLZ3 mixer
a studio where I could actually play all this stuff at a volume that would get me in trouble at home.

Sold a few things and now i think i finally have my studio that i will probably never ever change.

Machinedrum MK II UW
Monomachine MK II +
Kurzweil K2000R
MPC 1000 JJOS2 (won't be using as much but can't get rid of it)
NI Maschine (will be my be all end all sampler/daw)
Vestax Controller One w/ Rane TTM56 (going to replace with Ecler HAK 380)

2 Mackie Onyx Blackbirds

DBX 166XL
Alesis 3630
Lexicon MX 400

Boss RE-20
Alesis Bitrman
Korg KP 3

Line 6 POD XT for Guitar

Logic Studio for more free flowing stuff.

Final Pieces I Want To Add
Korg Triton Rack
Moog Slim Phatty
Motu Midi Express XT
Cheap Bass Guitar
Line 6 POD Rack for Bass

Im moving in feb so i doubt i will get much done in the way of music till then.

Slimming down (again), my setup is the most minimal I've had in almost 15 years:

Core units
MD UW
SFX-6
Live 8 w/M4L
Serge Animoo

Mackie 1604VLZ (considering getting rid of the this to simplify the signal flow) iMac 27"
RME FF 400
MIDI/CVs
Various patchbays

Moog 12 stage rack mount phase shifter
Dopefer modular vocoder

In storage/never used OSCar (only one left;))
Multimoog
Roland SH-7
Korg 770
Yamaha RX7
Electro-Harmonix Bad Stone

On their way out
dbx 120XP subharmonic synth
MAM/Next vocoder
Monome 64
Electro-Harmonix Polyphase

Current setup

MnM SFX 60 MkI
MD UW MkII +
Nord Moduar G2 Expanded
Waldorf Blofeld with SL upgrade (probably selling this next year)
Rane SM82 line mixer
Behringer 6 channel UB mixer (want to change this to a mackie VLZ3)
Terratec 88 FW soundcard
MacBook Pro with Wave Editor and Renoise
Line6 POD 2.0

Want to add

For sampling/sequencing:
MPC 1000 (for sampl/seq and banging out beats) or Octatrack + drumpads

For warming and/or compressing stereo mix:

EHX 2ube and/or ART Pro VLA II or Overstayer Compressor

For some analog twisting:

Sherman Filterbank or NIIO Track Thickener or Ebbe und Flut and/or Pigtronix Polysaturator

Then I am close to my dream setup. Only things missing then are an incredible modular and a fat analog polysynth. :)

Elektron Machinedrum Mk II
(what else do you really need????) :silly:

Plugins: Hosted by my MacBook Pro

Eastwest Symphonic Orchestra Gold
Eastwest Symphonic Choirs
ReFX QuadraSid
U-he Zebra
Battery 3
Stylus RMX
Reaktor 5
Synthogy Ivory Grand Pianos

DAW and Audio Recording Setup:

Cubase 4.5.2 (my weapon of choice)
Logic Pro 8 (seldom used)
Steinberg MR816 CSX on my main machine, a G5 Quad with 10 GB RAM
MOTU 828 MK III on my MacBook Pro
Dynaudio BM6a Mk II Monitors
Steinberg CC121
Audioease Speakerphone 2
Sony Pictures Sample Library Volumes 1-10
iZotope Ozone 4 Mastering Suite
Mackie 1402 VLZ Pro
Blue Baby Bottle Mic

... miles of Mogami cables, 3 computer monitors, a couple of power conditioners, and then some UPS units to protect it all from the power company.

I'm happy with my gear. My studio is a blessing and all thanks go to God for giving me the opportunity to enjoy making music.

Finally, Pieces I Miss and deserve a shout-out (sold to others who hopefully got more out of these bad boys than I did):

Korg Triton Pro
Nord Lead 2

Waldorf Micro Q Keyboard
Roland JP 8000
Kurzweil module (can't remember the name... had a great a piano, a few good pads)

Peace!

Here's a pic of my little "studio";

http://i1357.photobucket.com/albums/q756/Ezequiel_Blurpenstein/STUDIOFRESH_zpsd9c39d51.jpg

Haven't got everything plugged the way I want it to just yet due to some electrical problems in our apartment.

Got this shit;

Elektron Monomachine
Novation SL MK II
Native Instruments Maschine
2 x Genelec 6010a
Mackie 802-VLZ3 Mixer
Korg Kaoss Pad Quad (never really use this, plan to sell it)
Yamaha MT4X Multitrack Cassette Recorder

That's it for now. I really wanted the A4, but promised myself that I'd produce some stuff from all the shit I've got first. Never really been materialistic all my life, but all this gear, man, it's so much fun, and you just want to try it all. :)

http://www.elektron-users.com/images/fbfiles/images/studio_pic_2.jpg Well here is my latest setup.....

Elektron Octatrack
Elektron Analog 4
Arturia MiniBrute
Korg Monotribe w/ midi mod

Will be getting a Monomachine and Machinedrum UW again asap.

This setup is really amazing. Very inspiring.

I sold everything i owned music gear wise about 3 years ago (when i got married) and just recently got back into it. About to build a studio room in my garage and then the gear aquisition will begin again.....

here is my live rig currently, the monomachine is going to get swapped out once I get an octatrack back in my studio again...or i might get a livid controller and do the ableton thing, still undecided.

this is the side of the studio that makes me need a sampler for live use

A bunch of stuff it seems macmini - logic9/Live8 SyncGen - A&H R16 Metric Halo ULN2 & 2882

amt8 .Speck x-sum
MonoMachine
Xbase
SE1x
Microwave XT
Macbeth M3X
Semblance

Eventide Space

Vermona Perfourmer 1
Airbase 99
OT
MDUW
Kawai K5000R
Novation K-Station
MAM vocoder
Alesis Micron
Casio MT45

Other processing stuff - EQ's compressors etc. Probably use 2 or 3 of these for every track. The MnM gets used the most of all my gear i'd say i always wonder how people can be efficient or keep track of things with a lot of synths, right now, i use a g2, oct, minibrute, snow, and vermona drm,

it seems like too much,,,,, the g2 could be studied by itself for months, the virus 2, i mean to really get the most out of them,

Korg ER-1 Mk2
Korg EMX
Akai Ewi3020m
Akai S2000
Roland W-30
Mackie CFX20 Mixer
Electrix MoFX

Sadly, no Elektron gear. I'm aiming for either a MonoMachine or Octotrack, or maybe a Machinedrum.

Hmm

Was big in traktor with the s4,x1,f1 (f1 is tight)

I am putting the laptop down and got MD UW II &
It's really really like the cooling thing ever. I got caught up putting samples all the time and actually wished i got
The mk1 first. The whole less is more thing really works
For my sandbox way of inspiring creativity.

So before i got any other elektron gear i most recently got A mpc 1000, and a korg electribe emx-1. You know the Brother-crew octave one? I saw them with a MM i think the
One with keys and that korg so i wanted to try too.

I will get the free jjos for the mpc to try who knows i might like it.

I do plan trying all the elektron gear before i commit to any.

See ya

Niio track thickener
Bunch of guitar pedals

Plus a variety of sound cards, mixers, Adat, midi guitar, acoustic guitar and bass,

And last but not least, iPad 3 sitting in a behringer is202.
Waldorf nave is mind blowing.

Been attempting a big cleanout though as the elektron trinity and processing/iPad stuff fills my cup. Avoiding modular land like the plague.

Gear lustings include the analog 4, which would become useful sequencing the 101, the new ms20, bass station 2, barefoot monitors, Roland mks80, zoom h5, and a nice quality lexicon or eventide reverb.

Synths & samplers:

Machinedrum UW mkII
Analog 4
Microkorg
Moog Voyager RME
Yamaha Rx7

Roland D50(borrowed from a friend)

Sequencers:

Doepfer maq 16/3
I Mac /Logic 9 (mainly used as a taperecorder and mixer)

Effects:

Roland Space Echo 501
Lexicon PCM96

Mixer:

Mackie 1202 VLZ

Monitors:

Adam A7
Sennheiser HD 25 (useless for mixing but good enough for tracking late at night)

Actually thinking about downsizing and only keep the MD and A4. The rest is not getting enough use these days even thou I sometimes do oldschool sessions with only the moog wired to the maq16/3 and the rx7 for rythm. Also good fun.
